ADMINISTRATIVE HISTORY

Toronto, Ontario.

In 1970, the report from the Royal Commission on the Status of Women was released with much publicity and anticipation. Commissioned by the federal government and chaired by Florence Bird, the report recognized women’s subordinate place in Canadian society and more significantly, it contained numerous recommendations to strengthen women’s position in Canada. Concerned that these recommendations would not be implemented, the National Ad Hoc Committee on the Status of Women was formed in 1971 by a group of resilient and determined women who did not want to see the report left to collect dust on the parliamentary shelf.

Led by Laura Sabia, the conference called “Strategy for Change” was held in Toronto in 1972 and was attended by 22 member groups of women. At a time when women’s liberation was considered a radical and controversial notion, these women felt the responsibility to collectively ensure that the report’s recommendations would be taken seriously. They created an umbrella organization that would represent the variety of women’s groups in Canada. Further, they proposed that this large organization would form committees to address key matters of concern, lobby the government for legislative changes and raise public awareness about women’s issues. During the “Strategy for Change” conference, it was decided that ‘Ad Hoc’ should be dropped from the name, thus in 1972 the National Action Committee on the Status of Women was born.

The National Action Committee, commonly referred to as NAC, has played an important role in raising awareness and effecting positive changes for women in Canada. Over time, the no. of member groups has increased dramatically and the National Action Committee on the Status of Women has become an important voice for women’s groups in Canada.

Although NAC has not been immune to controversy, or internal struggles, it has managed to successfully represent hundreds of women’s groups in Canada. In fact, by 1988 NAC had approximately 600 member groups registered as NAC’s subscribers. NAC’s primary role has been to raise awareness of women’s issues in Canadian society and lobby the government for institutional and legislative change.

NAC’s structure has remained consistent, even after 20 years. Led by an elected president, and supported by a no. of elected vice presidents, regional representatives and member groups, NAC has become a powerful force in Canadian society. It has tackled issues such as changes to the Constitution, abortion laws, immigration procedure, environmental pollution, bilingualism and an array of changes, issues and procedures.
Each year NAC holds an Annual General Meeting, in order to communicate with its member groups, assess old strategies and form committees to effectively organize their voices. Each member group has the opportunity to send a representative to the meeting who can vote on proposed amendments to the Constitution, or any motion that is brought forth. Approximately every two years, there is an election for a new presidential candidate; along with this president, vice-presidents and regional representatives form the NAC Executive, who make decisions about hiring and office practices and act as liaisons to member groups. The Executive meets throughout the year to provide continuity and direction. Members also have the opportunity to join committees, which meet during the year, plan and organize campaigns and report to the AGM.

The first NAC office was located in Toronto, with an office staff hired to keep NAC running smoothly. As NAC’s membership grew larger and it received more funding from the government, it was decided to open an Ottawa office. Unfortunately, it became expensive to have two offices therefore in 1995 it was decided that the Ottawa bureau would have to close down. Since then, the NAC Toronto office has changed location, size and personnel, reflecting financial and organizational pressures. In 1988 the staff unionized, the same year and intensive organizational review was held.

Over the years, each NAC president has brought her own talents, perspective and leadership direction to the organization. Typically, each president served a two-year term, beginning with Lauria Sabia. Subsequent presidents include Grace Hartman, Lorna Marsden, Kay Macpherson, Lynn McDonald, Jean Wood, Doris Anderson, Chavia Hosek, Louise Delude, Lynn Kaye, Judy Rebick, Sunera Thobani, Joan Grant-Cummings. While the structure of NAC executive includes the traditional president, vice-presidents and executive, NAC has always operated with close consultations with members at large and other committees. Mid-year meetings, table officer meetings and committee meetings were held throughout the year with reports made at the Annual General Meetings.

NAC has been instrumental in bringing women’s issues to the forefront of public discussion. During the 1984 Election, NAC’s efforts secured an unprecedented nationally televised debate on women’s issues. Also in the early 1980’s, in reaction to the cutbacks from the Conservative’s federal budget, the “Back On Track”Campaign encouraged women to voice their disapproval with these detrimental moves to cut funding to essential groups. As well, NAC has been vocal in lobbying for legislative and social change including Section 32 (b) of the Indian Act, changes to the Constitution in 1982, and equal pay for work of equal value. Other significant committees have included Survival of the Planet, Lesbian Rights, Justice, Immigrant and Visible Minority Women.

Funding for NAC has been inconsistent, dependant on federal government policy. NAC has relied heavily on federal funding, which has been problematic in recent years. Membership fees and fundraising campaigns have been essential to NAC’s survival. reduction of paid employees, changes in office space have been a challenge to NAC, but throughout its history, NAC has successfully managed to continue to work towards its goals of creating an society that is equal for men and women.

CUSTODIAL HISTORY

The National Action Committee stored its own records in both Toronto and Ottawa offices. In 1984, the archival records from the Toronto office were stored at a record storage company called The Fortress. These records later moved to storage at Pickfords, in Toronto, which became VitalBase. In August 1997, the NAC Executive passed a motion recommending that all NAC archival material be stored at the Canadian Women’s Movement Archives. The transfer of documents was completed in April 1998.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

These administrative records offer insight into Canada’s largest women’s group from the early 1970’s into the 1990’s. These records tell the story of the emergence of an organized representation of diverse feminist member groups from all across the country, each with their own mandate, focus and membership issues. These records provide a look into the complexities and challenges of successfully running a strong feminist organization that attempts to represent an array of opinions and values.

In order to reach the many member groups, NAC published short newsletters that highlighted current issues and pertinent events. The first publication, called Status of Women News (commonly referred to as Status) evolved into Memo, which finally became Feminist Action Feministe (and finally Action Now).

This collection contains all office records from NAC. This includes financial papers (audit records, bank stubs, invoices and receipts), correspondence, personnel files, executive and committee minutes and files, manuscripts, drafts and finished briefs, brochures and publicity material, audio and video material, photos, t-shirts, publications, files from Annual General Meetings, records of major NAC campaigns ad subject files of information relevant to the organization.

Series Description

This preliminary inventory is divided into nine series. The series divisions were arrived at following the box inventory list. Some series could be broken down further, but at this stage, the organization remains at a general level.
Series one, Annual General Meetings contains records from Annual General Meetings beginning in 1976 and ending in 1994. This series is not a complete chronology but could be used in conjunction with the CWMA main file records.

Series two, Campaigns, includes records of NAC priority actions as well as other issue-oriented events that were not sponsored by NAC, but were a concern for women (ie. International Women’s Year 1975, or Free Trade).

Series three is Executive/ Committees which contains minutes of meetings and committee files.

Series four, Financial Records, contains financial records of the organization which includes bank statements, audit trails, expense claims, received cheques, fundraising information and grant applications. This series could be broken down into a two smaller series.

Series five, Journals, contains correspondence received by NAC from 1980 to 1991. The term ‘Journal’ was created by the NAC office staff to represent a collection of all correspondence received each month for their files.

Series six, Office/ Administration/ Personnel contains records from 1977-1994 in regards to office procedure, activity reports, and personnel matters such as hiring and union procedures. Lists of member groups are included here. The personnel files could be removed to create their own series.

Series seven, Publications, contains printed copies and working drafts of the NAC newsletters which began as Status of Women News, then became the NAC Memo, Feminist Action Feministe, and finally Action. These publications span from 1973 to 1988.

Series eight, the Penney Kome files, contains all of Penney Kome’s records from Taking of 28, (her book) as well as transcripts and recordings of interviews done for her personal research as commissioned by NAC.

Series nine, Videocassettes contains one box of unlisted videos.
